22nd June. In this year of grace when the whole atmosphere is surcharged with the din of Jubilee of our Sovereign Lady Queen Victoria, and when the different sections of Her Majesty's subjects creed, race or religion, in the display of their loyalty and devotion to the person and throne of their August Sovereign, the British subjects in this sixth corner of the world may be said to their mite to this grand national fets. The subscription list was put in circulation only a fortnight ago, and about $1,000 were readily subscribed, a sum which, it is thought, is too inadequate to admit of the somewhat elaborate programme being carried out in its entirety, but for the matter of that, a sum which is, nevertheless, neither too niggardly nor small looking at the smallness of the community, and when it is remembered that there was another demand from the worthy spouse of our British Minister at Peking made on the purse of the fair sex in the community to subscribe to the funds of the "Women's Jubilee Memorial to the a sum verging very near on $200 was subscribed by this soft-hearted and amiable section of H. Of these thousand dollars, the expenses incidental to the ephemeral show and rejoicings swallow up more than four hundred dollars, and as the surplus remaining at the disposal of the Committee is not so large as to meet the cost of the purchase of ground for, and building of a Jubilee Wing in the compound of the Chinese Hospital, for the admission of all foreigners suffering from epidemic diseases, it is not beyond the range of probability that this favourite hobby of a few will hang fire. Thus prepared with the Jubiles budget of income and expenditure, the Committee issued invitation cards to all the members of the foreign community other than the British subjects,they having a right of admittance to the Consulate grounds—to witness the ceremony of planting the Jubilee Tree and take part in the general rejoicings, which came off yesterday. The day was observed as a general holiday, the Custom House, the Consulate, and the merchants' offices being all closed to general business. The weather was all that one could wish for, the scorching June sun being concealed behind white of the heat in the day. Nor was there any drizzling or short showers of rain, so uncertain and sudden at this time of the year, to mar the joy and damp the spirits of the general public. In one wild night of en-From the plough to the judicial bench seems a thusiastic abstinence the "Anti-Vice Society" are bound by a solemn vow to receive no atin any form whatever. The plain ladies of Newtown flocked to sign this pledge, and for a week it was believed that the young men of the neigh-bourhood were passionately emptying the con-tents of their cellars into the main drain. Certainly at several of the best houses the "German ' languished; and many of the most eligible bachelors of Newtown were discovered in the supper-room trying hard to conquer their weakness for champague and claret-cup. Then came a disquieting rumour. It was whispered that the young Bacchi and Sileni of Newtown were visiting around in the neighbouring towns and villages. Some of the most ruffianly had even taken the train for New York, and were to be heard of in all the best mansions on Fifth Avenue. The "Anti-Vice Society," undismayed, held meetings stoutly. They had a conversatione, and an "At Home"—a function which the local newspaper declared to be quite unnecessary, in view of the native "homeliness" of members of the "Antivice Society." But still no young men put in an appearance. The boycotted were boycotting the ladies drinking tousts deeply in other parts of New Jersey to the confusion of teetotalism generally. At length, after five weeks' experience, the rules of the society have been so far relaxed that members are now permitted to consider amorous propositions on the part of any male

EXTRACTS. LIVELY POKER.

FIVE ACRS, A BIG POT AND TWO DEAD MEN. They had a poker game here Siturday night, says the Farmington Correspondent of the New York Sun, in the back room of Jicarillo Bob, who was present to see that everything was fair. The men at the table were Tom Sinsabaugh, a cattle-dealer, and Potter Abert, Omaha Throup and Pap Williams, gamblers. The game had been going along for some time without much excitement and with no very large winnings, when suddenly Pap Williams, who had thrown down two oards, offered to go it blind for $50. The others saw him, and crowd that had assembled at the bar moved over to see how the thing would come out. All the other drew three cards each. liams ran his cards over carelessly, called for a drink, and with a cigar in one corner of his mouth said he would bet $50. All the others staid in, and on the show-down, no one munifesting a disposition to raise it. appeared that there were five aces out, Pap Williams having three and Potter Abert two. This discovery came very near sulting in war, but at the suggestion Jicarillo Bob the pot was left up and a new deal was had, he taking the extra acc and

There was now more than $100 in the pot, and, Abert offered to bet $50, the others felt that they would have to see him. When it came around to Abert again he concluded to raise the terms a little, and he put up $100. MODERN NOMADISM.

Almost within earshot of the din and clatter of busy Huddersfield are the silent roins of an ancient nunnery known as the Kirklees. If we are asked of what use a fifty-thousand. acro forest can possibly be in an age and a country like our own, we seem to find a of weakness. Keeps good in the hottest climates and sufficient answer in those annual outbursts of the nomadic temper which we experience as surely as summer greenery breaks forth once more. So far from being extinguished, the here ditary delight in occasional intervals of Bohemian existence seems to gather new strength from the contrast with modern routine. Our capricious atmosphere scarcely begins to renew its brief season of geniality India. before we are planning as to how, when, and where the shackles of urban life can be most completely shaken off. More and more decid. Company. ed, as each year revolves, is the liking for a temporary recourse, in outward life at least, 9. Puncuinca Avenue, London, England, [1149] to the principles of Robin Hoodism. The sign is good, for it tells of a fresh access of physical bealth and staming to our genera. tion, and of the contentment which a sturdy frame can find amid those conditions of existence which it is usual to describe as " roughing it." It is uncertain, by the way, whether any phraseologist has ever concerned himself to discover the antithesis of this expression; but, if to be sought exclusively among the conditions of artificial life, it can hardly be defined with invariable accuracy as "smoothing it." One result of this revival of the love for a roaming life is that the modern nomad is beginning at last to penetrate some of the recesses of his own country. Some of our own forests have absolutely been rediscovered. Our sons are telling us tales of ancient romance and modern adventure in Ashdown, St. Leonards, Savernake, Wool: mer, Needwood and Whittlebury; and descanting upon the charms of regions which in our own hoyhood we scarcely even knew by name. Did we, for instance, ever tell our children of those old iron mines in Tilgate Forest, where the metal was smelted from the ore with charcoal made from the surrounding timber-a metal which, if tradition be correct ings enclosing St. Paul's Churchyard ? Did we ever narrate how the Countess of Suffolk, DAFILA, Brit. str., Watts.-A. R. Or, did we ! ever describe, with bated breath, that weird scene in the Porest of Gaultries, when Sir Anthon Bek, the Bishop of Dorham, encountered the apparition of the robber, Hugh de Pointebardon, called De Gros Veneur; and how, when the Bishop said unto him, " Hugh what maketh thee here?" he "epake never THE Undersigned, Agents for Messrs. word, but lifted up his cloke and shewed Sir-Anthon his ribbes set with bones, and nothing more?" All these stirring memories not to mention the wondrous beauties of natural scenery, as fresh, to-day as when the Parliament Oak was a sapling-are matters wherein we have to see our children instructing ourselves. There is a reaction against sterm and horse-firsh as the only sources of holiday locomotion, and every succeeding summer sees a contingent of our health-seekers distributed through the land with but associated with more or less remance, ever since the first "dwellers in Lenta" contributed their share to the world's history. A wandering existence implies a free choice of the best climates and the most fertile lands; or, in other words, the maximum of health and comfort with the minimum of labour. Not that these two conditions stand by any means in the relation of cause and effectexcepting, perhaps, in the logic of a romantic imagination. But there is a sense of power in the idea of claiming the whole habitable world as a residence; and whether the temporary shelter be a goatskin tent on the plains of Morocco, or a house-boat at Honley, it possesses the undefinable charm of a portable homestead. The modern nomad differs from the Bedouin or the Sioux Indian only in that fortune, instead of the teeming earth, has provided his necessaries and luxuries. There is a tribe, one may almost say a nation, of such at the present day, to whom a roving life is no mere holiday relaxation, but the chronic order of their lives. No matter on what part of wild or civilised travel one may chance to wander, these modern sons o their life's happiness is contained in the thought that they will be "here to-day and gone to-morrow." All nationalities contribute to the ranks of modern nomadism; but the English-speaking races in by far the largest proportion.
